

Clean Break: 8 of the Best Eco Hotels in the World

You've carbon off-set your flights, packed a reusable water bottle, slathered on the reef-safe sunscreen and bought a bikini made from recycled ocean plastic. Don't stop there, these are some of the best places to stay to keep your conscience clean

Scroll on for an exclusive reader offer when booking a villa before 1 November 2019

Zuri Zanzibar, Tanzania

On the northern tip of Unjuga, Zanzibar archipelago's largest island, Zuri is a village-like complex which weaves nature and heritage from the area into the modern African design. The hotel is the first ever to be awarded EarthCheck's Sustainable Design Gold Certification. It also offers young locals tourism training in Kendwa and partners with social enterprises such as The Seaweed Co, which provides female seaweed farmers with the chance to support themselves economically. The focus here is on social sustainability, and the hotel has created and supported infrastructures like a local library.

From £399 for a double room, zurizanzibar.com